INTERVIEW PREPARATION GUIDE

Prepare examples, questions and a reliable interview plan

Practical guidance • Clear steps • Honest representation

A structured guide for preparing for interviews across entry-level, internship and experienced roles. Interview formats and evaluation criteria vary by employer.

1. Understand the role and employer

- Review the job description and identify likely competencies or technical requirements.
- Research the employer using trustworthy public sources.
- Prepare a short explanation of your interest that is specific and honest.

2. Prepare evidence-based examples

- Choose examples from work, study, projects, volunteering or other relevant experience.
- Use a simple structure: situation, task, action and result (STAR).
- Explain your own contribution and what you learned; do not claim another person's work.

3. Practise common question types

- Prepare to discuss your background, relevant strengths, learning goals and a challenge you handled.
- For technical roles, practise the relevant skills and explain your reasoning clearly.
- For unfamiliar questions, clarify the question and think aloud when appropriate.

4. Prepare questions for the interviewer

- Ask about responsibilities, success measures, team collaboration, onboarding or next steps.
- Avoid questions already answered clearly in the job description or public information.
- Do not assume that every interview will cover salary, benefits or the same stages.

5. Plan logistics and follow-up

- Confirm time zone, format, location or meeting link, contact person and any requested materials.
- Test technology in advance for a remote interview.
- Afterward, send a brief thank-you message if appropriate and follow the employer's timeline.

Key takeaways

- Practise aloud, but avoid memorized answers that sound unnatural.
- Be truthful about your experience and skill level.
- Prepare questions and logistics as carefully as answers.
